FALL RIVER, Mass. — U.S. Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., last Monday announced a $360,000 Save America's Treasures federal grant to help restore the teak decks of the decommissioned battleship Massachusetts.

The announcement was made at a press conference aboard the 1942 dreadnaught in Battleship Cove. The decommissioned destroyer Joseph P. Kennedy, named after the senator's oldest brother who died in World War II, is berthed nearby. The late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy served on the same destroyer in 1946.

There are 26,000 square feet of wooden deck, and the $360,000 will go toward a $720,000 partial restoration project underway. About 4,000 square feet has already been replaced. The worst teak planks will be replaced, others will

Naval Station Newport got a taste of native American lifestyle through an interactive program presented by visiting Mohegan tribal members last week in Building 690. NAVSTA observed November National American Indian and Alaska Native Heritage Month.

Principal speaker was Shane "White Raven" Long, community and cultural specialist with the Cultural Programs Department of the Mohegan Tribe Council of Elders in Uncasville, Conn. He was joined by Grant 'Spirit" Fox and Susan "Golden Wolf" Meehan.

Clad in native regalia and holding a braid of white sage, White Raven opened his presentation with a customary prayer in his native language, Algonquin.

Grant 'Spirit' Fox, the only wampum maker in the Mohegan tribe, explains its symbolism during the native American presentation. The belt takes months to make from sea shells of two different colors.

PUBLIC NOTICE

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER

The United States Navy - Naval Station Newport Public Water System Has Levels of Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs) Above Drinking Water Standards

Our water system recently violated a drinking water standard. Although this is not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we are doing to correct the situation.

The United States Navy - Naval Station Newport (NAVSTA) Public Water System routinely monitors for the presence of drinking water contaminant's. The average results of tests taken during the last four quarters show that our system exceeded the standard, or maximum contaminant level (MCL), for TTHMs. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) standard for TTHMs is 0.080 milligrams per liter (mg/l). NAVSTA's average level of TTHMs for the last four quarters (January 1, 2004 to December 31, 2004) is 0.081 mg/l.

You do not need to use an alternate (i.e., bottled) water supply. You do not need to boil your water or take other corrective action. However, if you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor.

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?

This is not an emergency or immediate risk. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately. None of our testing has shown diseasecausing organisms in the drinking water.

Where disinfection is used in the treatment of drinking water, disinfectants (chlorine) combine with organic and inorganic matter present in water to form chemicals called disinfection byproducts (DBPs). EPA sets standards for controlling the levels of disinfectants and DBPs in drinking water, including TTHMs and haloacetic acids (HAAs).

Some people who drink water containing trihalomethanes in excess of the MCL over many years may experience problems with their liver, kidneys, or central nervous system, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer.

Many water systems treat their water with a chemical disinfectant, such as chlorine, in order to inactivate pathogens that cause disease. The public health benefits of chlorine disinfection practices are significant and well-recognized. One hundred years ago, typhoid and cholera were common waterborne diseases throughout American cities and disinfection was a major factor in reducing these epidemics. However, disinfection poses risks of its own. Since the discovery of DBPs in drinking water in 1974, numerous toxicological studies have been conducted that show some DBPs to be carcinogenic and/or cause reproductive or developmental effects in laboratory animals. In addition, epidemiological studies suggest that DBPs may be reproductive toxicants in humans under appropriate exposure conditions, however, the epidemiological database remains sparse, and is not adequate to infer that a causal relationship exists for any specific by-product or outcome. While many of these studies have been conducted at high doses, the weight-of-evidence indicates that DBPs present a potential public health problem. Consequently, one of the most complex questions facing water supply professionals is how to reduce risks from disinfectants and DBPs while providing increased protection against microbial contaminant's.

WHAT HAPPENED? WHAT IS BEING DONE?

NAVSTA purchases all of its water from the Newport Water Department (Newport Water), which owns and operates the Lawton Valley Water Treatment Plant (LV-WTP) and Station 1 Water Treatment Plant (STA 1 -WTP). TTHMs form with time when organic content that occurs naturally in the water reacts with chlorine as it breaks down. High levels of organic contents, using too much chlorine in the treatment process, or low water turnover could all result in elevated TTHM levels. The TTHM levels in this system are the result of high organic content of the raw water, the chlorination and treatment processes by Newport Water and NAVSTA, and the hydraulics at both plants and within the NAVSTA distribution system. NAVSTA being the endpoint of the Newport Water system often times purchases water that is close to and sometimes over the MCL. NAVSTA has taken the following steps to address the high TTHM levels:

- The amount of chlorine added to the water by NAVSTA has been reduced while still ensuring reliable bacteriological control. Over the last year NAVS-TA has limited the boosting of chlorine from 17 possible locations to only a few in the Melville area.
- · NAVSTA installed several automated chlorine injectors to try to help control TTHM by optimizing the amount of chlorine injected. Unfortunately, this does not help with the elevated levels that are entering our system from Newport Water.
- NAVSTA along with the Portsmouth Water and Fire District (PWFD) another large wholesale customer, has requested Newport Water to modify its plant operations to the maximum extent possible and permissible by regulations in an effort to minimize the production of all DPBs (which includes TTHMs).
- NAVSTA has sought, and will continue to seek, the assistance of the Rhode Island Public Utilities Commission, the Rhode Island Department of Health and the EPA to ensure that everything possible is being done to reduce the production of DBPs.
- NAVSTA's has argued its concerns about meeting current TTHMs regulation and proposed regulations to the Rhode Island Public Utilities Commission in the June 2004 rate hearing. NAVSTA placed water quality concerns as the most important factor to negotiate the rate changes.
- From the June 2004 rate hearing a new study was approved that will investigate and determine the most efficient treatment method or methods on a system-wide basis to address both short-term and long-term compliance issues regarding TTHMs facing Newport Water, PWFD and NAVSTA. The study is in the initial stages.
- NAVSTA is investigating the possibility of re-treating the water we purchase from Newport Water before distributing to our customers.
 Newport Water conducted a comprehensive evaluation of LV-WTP and STA 1 -WTP in 2003 to determine what improvements are required to meet all regulations on both a short and long-term basis. Newport Water is proceeding in implementing some of the recommended improvements within their NAVSTA is committed to resolving the TTHM problem. NAVSTA is required to test for TTHMs on a quarterly basis. It might take several quarters of testing with improved levels of TTHMs for NAVSTA to be in compliance with this standard.

HOW DO I FIND OUT MORE ABOUT THE PROBLEM?

Science classes having blast at Starbase Atlantis

A STAR CRUISER leaves the launch pad at Nimitz Field, Naval Station Newport. The rocket returns safely to earth with a parachute.

By JOY CHRISTMAS

NAVSTA Public Affairs Staff

Many kids dream of being astronauts. That dream came pretty close recently for some fifth graders attending the Starbase Atlantis Academy, Newport, last month at Naval Station (NAVSTA) Newport.

The 22 children in Liza Sporcic's class from Cranston-Calvert School in Newport are one of several fifth grades from around the East Bay who will attend the new academy this school year.

Coordinated by Commander, Naval Education and Training in Pensacola, Fla., the community outreach program is one of 49 programs in operation throughout the country.

The curriculum, taught by Department of the Navy (DoN) personnel, is designed to enhance the interest and use of math, science and technology by local youth with hands-on activities that are both enriching and fun.

The Newport program that occupies spaces in Perry Hall this fall is the 13th to open on a Navy installation.

The Cranston-Calvert class assembled on Nimitz Field to launch their own personal rockets, the finale to 25 hours of math and science instruction. Each pupil could hardly wait for his turn at the launch pad.

The flight of the rockets varied, but it was the culmination of lessons learned through hands-on experiments and activities in such areas of lift and thrust, gravity, drag, the solar system, and even teambuilding over the one-day-a week, fiveweek program. Over the duration of the course a lot of curriculum was covered that kept the students' undivided atten-

"It (the program) is designed so the students will have fun while they're learning," said Andrelino Alix, one of two instructional systems specialist who co-

As if in pilot training, students pick their own call names and even test their piloting skills at computer terminals with controllers and visuals mirroring a real cockpit.

Shannon McCutcheon, 9, said she looked forward to the weekly class and the different fun activities.

Although excited to return each week, they all looked forward to launch day to show visiting parents what they learned. Her class also took a trip to Newport State Airport in Middletown to sit in the cockpit of a real plane.

"I enjoyed learning about the plane and then sitting in actual plane," said McCutcheon, whose rocket went the farthest and was awarded captain's wings at graduation.

being in a regular classroom," said Brianna Simas, 10.

Sporcics said the program is fantastic, as it augments lessons taught in her own classroom. The curriculum both meets and exceeds her expectations.

"The students are not introduced to physical science until the sixth grade," she said. "I am excited to get feedback from their teachers next year about how it will affect their background knowledge. They have loved this. They couldn't wait to get back here each week."

"We learned a lot and did a lot of experiments," said Stephen McMonagle, 11. "It was fun to find out what worked, what didn't, and why."

Retired Senior Chief Mark McCutcheon, Shannon's father, said the curriculum is fascinating. "I love their teaching methods; they really keep their attention," he said. "All they talk about is the rocket. I wish I had this when I was growing up."

believe prayers are carried to the creator in smoke as it washes over your body."

He said the Mohegans as well as the Pequot Indians are not native to Connecticut, but part of another clan from Delaware called the Long Island Lenapes.

"The Mohegans have lived in Connecticut for about 600 years," he said. "This may seem like a long time, but it is not, considering native Americans have lived in Rhode Island between 5,000 and 10,000 years."

Native Americans had no alphabet; no written language. Everything was passed down through singing, dancing and religious ceremonies, with the exception of the wampum belt.

Holding up the famous Hiawatha Belt, White Raven explained how the wampum "talks" about freedom of speech, freedom of religion and a government for the people and by the people, and that people should be free, not enslaved.

The ideals of the Founding Fathers were already written in wampum, so Benjamin Franklin took the ideas and put them directly into the Constitution of the United States, he said.

Each tribe has its own wampum maker to document history. The Mohegan's wampum maker "Spirit" explained the tedious task it takes to grind, polish and string each piece of shell into symmetrical beads.

As far back as the Revolutionary War, native Americans have served with distinction in every branch of the military in every major conflict. More than 8,100 native Americans are on active duty in the Navy today. Over the past 100 years, five have been awarded the nation's highest military decoration, the Medal of Honor.

Storyteller Golden Wolf joined White Raven in a dramtic storytelling, and with Spirit led the audience in various ceremonial dance rituals to celebrate the fall harvest, marriage and other events.

Following the ceremony, a heritage lunch was enjoyed at Ney Hall galley.

The Joyce rescued 13 of the German sailors, one of whom, Petty Officer Heder, later died from wounds received. The rest of the crew went down with the submarine.

be restored, and all planks will be resealed to prevent water seepage, a Battleship Cove spokesman said.

The grant is part of a larger $1.5 million package for a total of five historic properties in the Bay State. The other four are in Boston and Waltham.

Kennedy said the Save America's Treasures program, started by former First Lady and now New York Sen. Hillary Clinton, designates certain historical sites as worthy of preservation. Many of those are in Massachusetts.

"We are not just meeting on the deck of a ship," he said. "This is an important, living war memorial that is part of the community. This is a place of life; this is a place of the future."

He said one of the Battleship Cove's missions is to provide an experience that promotes duty, honor and country.

The cove is home to the Commonwealth's official memorials to those who died in World War II, Korea, Vietnam, the Persian Gulf War and most recently, the Massachusetts Sept. 11 Memorial. It is the site of the world's largest naval ship exhibit, the National PT Boat Museum, and the Admiral Arleigh Burke National Destroyermen's Museum.

Frequent retirement and reenlistment ceremonies, and regular Pearl Harbor Day, D-Day and Memorial Day ceremonies are held aboard ship. Since 1972 "Big Mamie" has hosted Nautical Nights overnight camping adventures.

Sharing in the announcement was U.S. Rep. James McGovern, D-Mass., who was also instrumental in securing the grant.

Retired Coast Guard Capt. Ernst M. Cummings, executive director of Battleship Cove, and George H. Brenner, president of its board of directors, presented Kennedy with a painting of the battleship and a piece of the ship's original teak decking.

The battleship Massachusetts arrived in Fall River in 1965, and in 1998 she underwent $10 million in hull repairs in South Boston.

AT&T phone cards free to deployed sea forces

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (NNS) — The Navy Exchange Service Command (NEXCOM) and AT&T will provide free $10 prepaid phone cards to those Sailors, Marines and Coast Guard personnel who will be underway aboard U.S. Navy ships and Coast Guard vessels with AT&T Direct Ocean Service phones during the December holiday season.

NEXCOM will distribute 21,000 free phone cards during the holidays.

"NEXCOM and AT&T have worked together over the past few years to bring a little taste of home to those underway during the holidays," said Jennie Virden, NEXCOM personal telecom-

Submarine Jimmy Carter back from Alpha Sea Trial

GROTON, Conn. (NNS) — PCU Jimmy Carter (SSN 23), the nation's newest nuclear-attack submarine, returned to General Dynamics' Electric Boat (EB) Shipyard Nov. 19 after successfully completing its Alpha Sea Trial (AST).

AST is the first underway period designated for propulsion-plant and tightness-dive testing.

"During her trials, we put her through a full range of speed and depth capability, plus we tested out the majority of her systems that are essential for the safe operation of the ship," said Adm. Kirkland Donald, director, Naval Nuclear Propulsion, embarked upon Jimmy Carter for the AST, "and it was an unqualified success."

For three days prior to the underway test, Jimmy Carter's crew pushed through a gauntlet of trials and tests, doing everything from emergency blows, to operating at test and maximum operating depths.

Donald lauded, Capt. Robert Kelso, Jimmy Carter's commanding officer, and his crew for their performance.

"I've had the opportunity to observe the crew through the entire breadth and depth of the trials," he said. "It is clear they have invested the time they need to in training, and making sure they understand the capabilities of the ship and how to operate it. And they showed that in the finest sense throughout the trials.

Historical book added to recruit's Navy seabag

PENSACOLA, Fla. (NNS) — Sailors who complete recruit training later this year will receive a new book in their traditional Navy seabag that focuses on Navy heritage and tradition.

A Sailor's History of the U.S. Navy, written by Thomas J. Cutler and published by the Naval Institute Press, takes a historical look at the Navy from a different perspective — that of the individual Sailor — with stories of honor in battle, courage under fire and commitment in service. The author uses short stories about true events from throughout the Navy's history, to lay a fundamental plan of military conduct, professionalism and core values for those who serve in today's volunteer Navy.

Adding the book to the Sailor's seabag was a decision made by Vice Adm. Alfred G. Harms Jr., commander, Naval Education and Training Command (NETC), who recognized the value of providing Sailors with such information.

"This book relates historic events throughout our history that have solidified our heritage as a Navy and a seafaring profession, to which, the role of every person, enlisted and office-every USS Barry (DDG 52), USS Carney (DDG 64), part of the Navy team — is important," Harms USS Taylor (FFG 50), USS O'Bannon (DD 987), added. "We all subscribe to the same core char-USS Boone (FFG 28), USS Halyburton (FFG 40), acteristics, and that's what gives the Navy its
